EXHIBITION & PARTNERSHIP OPPORTUNITIES

ICTRHN 2015

Welcoming message

The 3rd International Congress of Translational Research in Human Nutrition covers integrative approaches in nutrition from basic science to clinical applications. The meeting focuses on the role of the intestinal microbiota in chronic diseases, with both intestinal and extra-intestinal manifestations. Recently, high throughput approaches have greatly enhanced our knowledge of the nature and function of the intestinal microbiota, and helped to highlight the role of key gut microbes in various chronic diseases. In clinical settings, this integrative approach is compulsory for a better understanding and management of the complex interplay between microbiota, nutrition and pathological disturbances such as intestinal bowel diseases and/or extra-intestinal chronic diseases. Manipulating the microbiota through nutritional approaches seems very promising for the forthcoming management of such chronic diseases.

The meeting will be held in Clermont-Ferrand, the capital of Auvergne, with its Universities, University Hospitals and Research Institutes such as the INRA, the French National Institute for Agricultural Research and Inserm, The National Institute for Medical Research. Auvergne is a magnificent province of France, famous for its volcanoes such as the Puy de Dôme, its history, castles, Roman churches and gastronomy. The Scientific and Organizing Committees set up an attractive scientific program with outstanding international speakers. We will be delighted to welcome you in Clermont-Ferrand and to make you discover the charms of Auvergne.
