Within the limits of applicable law, citizens have the opportunity to express religious preferences by acting following them.

These preferences can be the main criteria of a transaction, in which two private parties contract.

The principle of secularism, which guides the functioning of state institutions, has no bearing on agreements concluded between private parties.

The commercial-type insurance contract operating according to the fixed premium method is tainted by Gharar which renders it obsolete, and therefore illegal from the point of view of Muslim law. The alternative is the mutual insurance contract based on the principle of mutual assistance. The same is true for reinsurance in an Islamic framework based on the principle of mutuality.”

- Risk pooling between participants
- Cooperation, protection and mutual aid (Ta'awun)
- Voluntary contribution (Tabarru')
- Investments of funds according to the rules of Islamic finance

1.3 Regulatory & legal aspects

For many years, a problem faced by Islamic financial institutions has been the absence of an appropriate legislative framework to support their establishment and promote their growth. This problem has been moderated by the emergence of AAOIFI and IFSB.

AAOIFI

The Accounting and Auditing Organization for Islamic Financial Institutions (AAOIFI) was created, by the agreement signed by Islamic financial institutions on February 26, 1990, in Algiers. AAOIFI is composed of more than 200 members (central banks, Islamic banks, audit firms, etc.).

- The AAOIFI standard n ° 26 promulgated on May 5, 2006, deals with Takaful insurance.

IFSB

The Islamic Financial Services Board (IFSB) is an international standards organization that was officially launched on November 3, 2002 and started operations on March 10, 2003. Its headquarters are in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia.

Since 2009 six standards relating to Takaful have been promulgated by the IFSB:

- IFSB-8 Guiding Principles on Governance for Takâful (Islamic Insurance) Undertakings (2009)
- IFSB-11 Standard on Solvency Requirements for Takâful (Islamic Insurance) Undertakings (2010)
- IFSB-14 Standard On Risk Management for Takâful (Islamic Insurance) Undertakings (2013)
- IFSB-18 Guiding Principles for Retakâful (Islamic Reinsurance) (2016)
- IFSB-20 Disclosures to Promote Transparency and Market Discipline for Takâful/Retakâful Undertakings (2018)
- IFSB-25 Key Elements in the Supervisory Review Process of Takâful/Retakâful Undertakings (2020)

ISLAMIC LAW

REGULATION

FRENCH LAW

The Takaful operator must ensure that insurance operations comply with the rules and principles of Shari'ah.

To exercise takaful, it is necessary to transpose Islamic law in compliance with the legal framework of the country in which the operator wants to exercise (POG, IDD, etc.).

The solvency regime must reflect the risk nature.

If there is a deficit in the subscription fund, the insurer must grant an interest-free loan, or make a contribution reminder to the members.

4.3 Pricing

Demand elasticity

We aim for affordable prices without seeking to take advantage of the absence or weakness of competition to increase them, at the risk of creating mistrust.

Compliance to French law

Product Oversight and Governance

- Identification of co-designers
- Target market identification
- Risk assessment relevant to the target market
- Definition of a suitable distribution strategy
- Technical monitoring
- Commercial monitoring
- Anticipation and detection of any conflict of interest
- Product review planification

Compliance to Islamic law

- The Fund must not be involved in a transaction in which there may be interest
- Any interest income, even if it is improperly earned by the Fund, must be distributed to charities
- No document of the Fund may contain any expression implying an interest charge or payment, ambiguity, excessive uncertainty or games of chance.
- It is strongly recommended to keep the funds collected from participants in a separate Shari'ah compatible bank account
