New material extracted from revised Tocharian A texts

Complementary methods for understanding texts, and gaining the meaning of words.

- 1) The internal method, based on the structure of the Toch. text, and its internal logic, completed by the combinatorial method, i.e., confrontation of other Toch. texts.
- 2) The external method, resorting to parallel texts in other languages of Buddhism.
- 3) The contextual method, resorting to Indian and Buddhist culture, literature, arts, etc., and/or to the historical and cultural context of Central Asia, especially, but not exclusively, Tarim Basin.

§ 1. Reminder (Pinault 2019). Leaf of the MSN. A 285+281 (THT 918+914), plus little fragment THT 1408.k, giving the left corner of the leaf. OT parallel: MaitrHami V, 2 b14 to 4 a4. Sanskrit parallel: two texts at least, one (MPS) about the division and cult of the relics of the Buddha, and the other about the decadence and improvement of the living beings.

Meaning of the root TA ok- (TB auk-) ‘to produce, show’, translated by OT b(ä)lgür-. Compare Malzahn (2010): ‘to set in motion’, not ‘to give to drink’. Fitting all other uses of the verb, with the immortality (TA oñkraci) or ‘the medicine of immortality’ (TB sāmtke ... onwaññe) as direct object. Evident IE etymology: h₂e*-g- ‘to increase, let grow’.

TA yri ‘fence, enclosure’ = Skt. vedikā-. Standard description of wonderful cities (Ketumatī, Kuśavatī, etc.), see MSP, Maitreyavyākaraṇa, etc.

TA wpāl = OT kūl ‘ashes’; verbal noun of TA wāp^ā- ‘to consume’. No gloss in Malzahn (2010).

TA puṣem, new title of the Buddha, cognate with TB puś and adjective TB puśamaṣṣe. Derived from TA/TB puś ‘Buddhahood’. Probably of Iranian origin.

N.B. While TA/TB texts are adaptations or translations of Sanskrit texts, several terms of the Buddhist terminology show some degree of Middle Iranian influence.

§ 2. New reading of a well-known text: Tale of the four masters of arts and the lion, part of the Puṇyavanta-jātaka. A 11 b2 to 13 a5 (THT 644-646). Sieg 1944: 14-16 first translation by Sieg 1916.

Description of the lion still asleep.

kākropu puk ś(twar pe)yu ; lyāṣknaṃ ywārśkā si cacp_uku :

kliso pāccās poṣṣāsā ; to lap śālyiṃ kolyeyac :

ākam yoktsās klośāṃ tsru ; lalku śāsmu śiśri koc :

śāmāṃ śiśkāṣ klisontāṣ ; śoll ats cami wākām ṣeṣ : 1

Translation: The four feet had he all fold up, he had hidden his tail between his thighs; lying on the right side, having placed his head toward the left paw. He let hang a little the ears, provided with hairs on their tips, (but) he had his whiskers raised upwards. Only life made him different from a living sleeping lion.

TA si, new noun, found by Itkin, Malyshev & Peyrot 2020. Cf. A 160 a1 (compared to a passage from the Saundarananda by Aśvaghōṣa, 10.11) ... camar(ā) ops(i) siyā(s)/// ‘the yak-bulls (were wagging) their tails’. Skt. camara-.

TA śiśri, not ‘mane’ as per Sieg (1944, with question mark); dual of śiśār* ‘whisker’, alias ‘nose-tail’ (Lat. vibrissae, Skt. gumpha- lex.), an organ which is typical of felines: pair of long hairs on both sides of the nose, which are highly sensitive. The noun for ‘mane’ was borrowed from Skt. kesara-, cf. kesār-śiśāk, calque of kesari-simha-.

Other duals in -i from -r-stems : TA pratri ‘two brothers’ from pracar, TA yusāri from yusār ‘season’, cf. TB pwāri from puwar ‘fire’.

IE etymology: < de*-k-ero- ‘indicator, indicative, pointer’; zero grade dik*- of this root in Toch. > tsāk*-, cf. denominative verb TB tskāññ- ‘to mark, characterize’.

Sūtra Pāli about the four types of lying posture. One is the sīhaseyya- ‘lying posture of the lion’ (PED: 714a). Aṅguttara-nikāya II, 245, transl. Bodhi 2012: 612.

katamā ca, bhikkhave, sīhaseyya? sīho bhikkhave migarājā dakkhiṇena passena seyyaṃ kappeti, pāde pādaṃ accādhāya, antarasatthimhi naṅguṭṭhaṃ anupakkhipitvā. so paṭibujjhitvā purimaṃ kāyaṃ abhunnāmetvā pacchimaṃ kāyaṃ anuviloketi. sace, bhikkhave, sīho migarājā kiñci passati kāyassa vikkhittaṃ vā visaṭaṃ vā, tena, bhikkhave, sīho migarājā anattamano hoti. sace pana, bhikkhave, sīho migarājā na kiñci passati kāyassa vikkhittaṃ vā visaṭaṃ vā.

‘And what is the lion’s posture? The lion, the king of beasts, lies down on his right side, having covered one foot with the other and tucked his tail between his thighs. When he awakens, he raises his front quarters and looks back at his hind quarters. If he sees any disorderliness or distension of his body, he is displeased. If he does not see any disorderliness or distension of his body, he is pleased.’

Confirmation: *lyṣäk, dual *lyṣäkäm, in the locative: ‘thigh’ = Skt. sakthi-. TB match would be lyṣäke*.

List of further body parts: 11 b6-12 a1 āyāntu śwāl /ysār yats krām yokyō

12 b2 āyāntu śwāl ysār krām yokyō

‘die Knochen mit Fleisch, Blut, Haut, Fell (?) und Haar’ (Schmidt 1974: 95)

‘the bones with flesh, blood, skin, outer skin, and hair’ (CEToM)

TA yats: TB yetse ‘(outer) skin’ (Adams 2013 : 549). = chavi- according to a bilingual ms. Plus A 217 b6 wsā-yok yats ‘gold-colored skin’ = Skt. suvarṇa-cchaviḥ. Cf. Ved. hīranya-tvac, -tvacas-, same image.

TA krām ‘(outer) skin’ (?) (Carling 2019: 171a). Probably not related to TB *krāñi(ye) ‘neck’ (= Skt. manyā-), cf. Adams 2013: 230.

New possible item: TB krāna, THT 1224 (+ 1213) b1 krāna auloṃ ‘k. [and] blood vessels’, oblique plural. Broken context: the preceding line ended with yamāṣate. Ogihara 2014: 246.

Confrontation with standard lists from Pāli. Paṭisambhidāmagga II, 232: iddhekacco āpokāyaṃ ... pe ... tejokāyaṃ... vāyokāyaṃ ... kesakāyaṃ ... lomakāyaṃ ... chavikāyaṃ ... cammakāyaṃ ... maṃsakāyaṃ ... rudhirakāyaṃ ... nhārukāyaṃ ... aṭṭhikāyaṃ ... aṭṭhimiñjakāyaṃ aniccato anupassati, no niccato.

DN II, 336: ‘tena hi bho, imaṃ purisam anupahacca chaviñca cammañca maṃsañca nhāruñca aṭṭhiñca aṭṭhimiñjañca jīvitā voropetha, appeva nāmassa jīvaṃ nikkhamantaṃ passeyāmā’ ti.

In all these lists, from outside to inside, the order of terms for the skin is always: P. chavica- = Skt. chavi- ‘skin’ vs. carman- ‘hide, skin, leather’. Then TA yats (B yetse) = chavi- vs. TA krām (TB krāna) = carman-. Skt. chavi- refers to the surface of the skin, ‘outer skin’, to the complexion, see the evolution inside Sanskrit towards ‘color’.

In such binomial phrases, it was always possible to reduce the pair to a single item, for instance TB yetse or TA krām.

Etymologies. TB krāna, possibly plurale tantum, cf. mīsa ‘flesh’, hence krānā*. Collective shifted to singular in TA. CToch. kārān-* < krH-n-* or levelling of kH-ōn-*, cf. Lat. carō, gen. sg. carnis ‘flesh’ (de Vaan 2008: 94). < ‘piece’. Root (s)ker- ‘to cut’, etc, basis of Ved. cārman-.

TB yetse, TA yats < yætsæ* < H-ot-o-*, cf. Ved. éta- ‘of varying color, shimmering’ (vs. fem. éñī-, noun eñ- - fem. ‘antelope’) < He-t-o-. Basis : Hé-ot- ‘(shimmering) color’ or the like. H* = h₁* or h₂*, depending on other comparanda.

Remark about the composition of Tocharian narrative texts: the collage. Inserting pieces of different texts of Sanskrit origin in the main text of the story.

Further instances, see the tale of the painter and the mechanical girl (Pinault 2008: 263-268): the comparison of human bodies with puppets; the list of women with whom a wise man should avoid forming any relationship.

Recurrent use of lists of notions, of Sanskrit origin, alternatively inspired by Sanskrit or Middle Indic. Pervasive use of clichés and metaphors of Indian origin.

§ 3. Extract of the Maitreyāvadāna-vyākaraṇa. New reading of A 222 (THT 855), completed with A 239 (THT 872), belonging to 2 different manuscripts (219-238 and 239-242). A 239 overlaps partially with A 222. The end of the leaf 222 finds a decisive parallel in Maitrisimit nom bitig, Turfan (Sängim/Murtuq) recension, chapter XIX, Taf. 57 and 58 (BT IX, I: 160-162), where some details are somewhat more developed, according to habits of the Uighur translators.

Meter 4 x 14 syllables: 7 (4+3)/7 (4+3).

Tentative translation: (102) Through the decay (kāṣāya-) pertaining to being (sattva-), rule (kalpa-), afflictions (kleśa-), views (dṣṭi-), and time (āyus-), the mind of the living beings got lost. (103) They were, friends as well as enemies, bound to evil [and] wicked. No living beings at all indeed did refrain from evil. Kings, ministers, clerks, depraved men, judges, (people) belonging to suburbs and villages, did take wrongly the law. (104) They were avid from birth, searching for profit [and] gain. Through the greed linked to injustice, the beings in the countries were deluded. Then [if] ceremonies happen to be performed by them, wind [and] rain made troubles for them. And for these ones the canes did not ripen nor develop at right time. (105) The tree (was) producing that (weird) fruit, not having matured correctly. Following immediately that their mind got lost. They become ugly in their aspect. The afflictions held off the touching of the viaticum. Joyfulness disappeared for sure. Even by making efforts, the blessing (obtained) through the feeling of disgust was difficult (to reach). (106) The Buddha-lord made continuously unlimited effort in order to make these beings feeling disgust. For a long time, they were not feeling disgust, even for a single moment. This excellent sage from the Śākya-clan (= Śākyamuni) had a brother called Nanda, the beautiful one (saundara-), the younger brother of the sage from the same father. (107) Through huge effort [and] zeal the Buddha lord took him away from home (= from householder-life). His mind was clung to the woman, he did not consent to feel disgust. He (the Buddha) led him to the sages, thereafter he led him to the gods, afterwards, whenever he led him in hell, this one (Nanda) felt disgust. (108) Devadatta had learned the Law, the three baskets (tri-piṭa-) completely. Like the scallop (lit. having shell) during twelve years he observed the observance. He sat in meditation; this one rose up to the controlling of supernatural power (□ddhi-). Through the admiration, through the honors (which he received), the mind of that one turned wholly astray [and] perverse. (109) He went far from the way of the Law, and he tried to kill the Buddha-lord. He committed the deadly sins (anantariya-); finally he fell in the Avīci hell. This one had a pupil named Kokālika, having become a monk (lit. having left home). He expressed (lit. set) blame [and] slander, in addition even on Śāriputra (lit. the son of Śāri), (110) and even on Maudgalyāyana. The god Brahmā himself restrained him. Even the Buddha-lord, the teacher restrained him again three times. From his way this one did not consent finally to refrain. He fell in the Mahāpadma (hell). By five hundred plowmen his own (tongue was plowed) in the hells. (111) Sunakṣatra crushed tiny animals; after having strewn them on the footprint of the Buddha-lord, he kept saying: ‘From where has this one his virtue consisting in Buddhahood?’ There was a householder called Śrīgupta, provided with means of killing. He covered for him a ditch with carpets above. He mixed poison in his (i.e., of the Buddha) meals. (112) Aṅgulimāla killed living beings, little less than 10.000 at once. Now he intended to kill his own mother. Through his power, the Buddha-lord went towards him at that time. Now, he decided to kill the Buddha-lord. He did not go to his goal. Then he became an Arhat: higher was the teacher. (113) There was at that time a king called Ajātaśatru, an evil one. This one, after having killed his own father, turned perversely in presence of the Buddha-lord. But finally he made the confession (deśanā-).

§ 4. A 381 (THT 1015). Preparation for the confession (deśanā) of a nun (bhikṣuṇī) before the assembly of monks and nuns. To be compared (partly) to A 371 (THT 915). Complete text.

[a1] With treating with homage the Arhat, the venerable one of both communities, I, the so-named nun, (I say:) O people! [a2] (If) I have transgressed any prescription pertaining to the Saṃghāvaśeṣas, some concealed, some not concealed, (such as) pertaining to lustful enjoyment, pertaining to passion [and] making connection for lustful enjoyment, [a3] pertaining to disdainful speech, pertaining to injuring of families, pertaining to only trifling matter (in accusing monks or nuns), pertaining to being alone amidst day [and] night, [a4] pertaining to going alone across a river, pertaining to standing for the suspension without refuge, I, the so-named nun, (if) [a5] I have transgressed those prescriptions, belonging to the Saṃghāvaśeṣa-sins, some concealed, some not concealed, may I have the pardon from both communities!

Loans and calques from Skt.

ñuk tāṣne ñomā (a1.4): Skt. aham itthaṃnāmā, used in the Karmavācanā.

avasrut : Skt. avasruta- (P. avassuta-) ‘foul, rotten’, here matching rather avaśruta- ‘sexually lustful’ (BHSD: 76a), special use in Vinaya. PED: 84b.

ritwāṣlune, cf. Skt. saṃcaritra-, P. saṃcaritta- ‘procuring, acting as go-between in liaisons’ (BHSD: 350a).

*kuladhvaṃsam < Skt. kuladhvaṃsana-, re-formulation of kula-dūṣaka- ‘injurer or spoiler of families’ (BHSD : 188a), P. kula-dūsaka- ‘one who brings a family into bad repute’ (PED: 223a). See Nolot 1999: 433-438.

*leśu-mātrār << laiśa-mātra-, cf. laiśamātraṃ dharmam, Prāt., P. lesamattam, quoted BHSD : 463b. Keyword laiśikaṃ ‘concerning a trifling thing’ (of accusing a monk of a pārājika sin [involving expulsion from the order of monks] on the basis of some trifling matter but afterwards repenting and confessing).

N.B. The TA term presupposes the analysis of the compound via MI transmission, hence borrowed (and not re-Sanskritized) leśā*, either enlarged with TA suffix -u (thus transposing Skt. laiśika-) or with ä > u in bilabial context, see late TB forms kaucu-wär, ñoru-wär (PK AS 18B) < kaucä-, ñorä-. *-mātrār, with redundant notation in interior position of final syllabic liquid after re-Sanskritization < māttār/māträ < mātra* at word-end, crossed with MI matta.

sne-sem: Skt. a-śaraṇa-, P. a-saraṇa- ‘without refuge’ (PED: 697b).

ṣmac : allative sg. of *ṣām, ‘remaining’ (separate, i.e., from the community), root noun of ṣām- ‘to sit, remain’.

The list of offences is not complete, nor exactly in the same order as in parallel texts:

a2. sexual passion (R. 4), go-between for rendez-vous (R. 1),

- a3. injuring or deprecatory speech, quarrel (R. 14, R.16, R.17, R.18), corrupter of families (R. 19), accusing for a pretext (R.3),
a4. being/travelling alone, day and night (R. 6-7 + R.8), crossing a river alone (R.9), renouncing the community and the 3 refuges (R. 13, R. 20).

During the preparation of this paper, I have much benefited from discussions with Timothée Chamot-Rooke and Athanaric Huard, both PhD students (EPHE, PSL) and members of the HisTochText team. I remain alone responsible for the content of these pages, including the errors.
