Messages vers le futur

Messages vers le futur was a public installation designed for the event La Nuit de Chercheurs 2012 in France. Participants logged into their Twitter account and wrote a message with the hashtag #messagesFutur. The text of the message appeared in a large-size projection. Each message was also represented as a 3D sphere that travelled through a wormhole and then disappeared in the distance.

The wormhole was indeed a hyperbolic mathematical figure coded in Processing. Tweets however got stored in a Gmail account and will be sent back to their users this year, later in 2022.
